DETAILED CHARACTER PLAN

Writers should use this exercise to consider a character they've created for a novel or story. It's a test of how well the writers know their character and understand their role in the story.

Character name.

Describe your character in a single sentence.

Describe your character's personality.

What is this character's purpose in the story?

How is this character different from any other character in the story?

What makes this character interesting to readers?

What does your character care most about?

What are this character's key physical traits?

What is the most important thing that has ever happened to this character?

What are the things this character cares the most about?

How does this character deal with problems?

What would it take to make this character change significantly?

What relationship does this character have with the other characters?
